Susanna Risberg

Susanna Risberg is one of the most prominent Swedish jazz musicians of her generation. The award winning guitarist has career behind her that has been going on for half of her 27 years long life, and her collaborations with artists such as Nils Landgren, Svante Thuresson, Magnus Lindgren and Bohusläns Big Band, and her solo projects has made Risberg a name to be remembered.

At age 26, Susanna Risberg has already managed to perform as soloist with several big bands and symphony orchestras, toured and recorded with numerous pop stars, won the Hagström scholarship for Guitarists twice (among other awards and scholarships), and studied at the Royal College of Music in Stockholm, and at Berklee College of Music, where she, among other things won the prestigious "Jimi Hendrix Award '11".

"The continually arresting playing on Vilddjur makes the case for Risberg as an original voice. Technically impressive and emotionally persuasive, Risberg is above all an exciting guitarist who dares to plot her own course. With Vilddjur, Risberg is truly worthy of inclusion in any discussion about important contemporary jazz guitarists."

- Ian Patterson, All About Jazz

"The bandleader brings an expressive life and tonal depth to the clean, dark-leaning sound of the mainstream jazz guitar tradition with nimble fingers and an agile creative force in her solos.

Compositionally, Risberg taps into various subgenres but defies strict allegiance to any one style. Odd meters and beguiling melodic fragments abound, and song structures can take unexpected twists.

Her guitar sound might be traditional, in jazz terms, but her approach is awash in contemporary concepts, both cerebral and heartbased."

- Josef Woodard, Downbeat Magazine

"One of Sweden's most interesting jazz guitarists."
- Johannes Cornell, Dagens Nyheter

"Jazz guitarist Susanna Risberg's new album (Vilddjur) is modern jazz at its best... Risberg's technique is brilliant and she uses this ability for the advantage of the tunes instead of "showing off". This is one of the things that makes Susanna Risberg a great guitarist"

- Lennart Götesson, Dala-Demokraten
